The Bishop of Lubbock

Most Rev. Robert M. Coerver

The Third Bishop of Lubbock

For his Personal Arms, seen in the dexter impalement right side of the design, Bishop Coerver adopted symbolic elements inspired in large part by his friend and architect, R. Andrew Bennett, all elements reflecting his life and heritage as well as his call to the fullness of the Holy Priesthood as Bishop of Lubbock.

On the top right-hand corner of the blazon, a red Chi-Rho. Greek letters which have since antiquity represented Christ, it's a symbol used by the Bishop a significant charge for his priestly ordination.

To the lower left on a green field, a gold carpenter's square signifying woodworking, which represents his Irish heritage, namely his mother's side of the family.

For his Motto, Bishop Coerver adopted the Latin phrase Suscipe Domine. Taken from the last meditation of the Spiritual Exercises of Saint Ignatius of Loyola and forming part of what is known as his Prayer of Self-Offering, it translates, "Take Lord, receive."

Completed with external ornaments of a gold processional Cross, standing behind the blazon, it bears the Trinitarian symbol of interlaced red knots, here symbolizing also Holy Trinity Seminary in Dallas, one of the Bishop's alma maters, on whose faculty he served for eleven years; and a pontifical hat, a galero, with its six tassels, in three rows, on either side of the shield, all in green.

Historical Outline

THE DIOCESE OF LUBBOCK

Established and Created a Diocese
June 17, 1983

The High Plains and Rolling Plains areas of West Texas - -the Panhandle, The Llano Estacado ("Palisade Plains") or South Plains, and the Concho River Valley - - first became home to a Roman Catholic Diocese when the Diocese of Amarillo was established in 1926. The Diocese of Amarillo embraced an area from Dalhart in the north to Ozona in the south. The part north of the Colorado River had been taken from the Dallas diocese and the section south of the river came from San Antonio (with two counties, Andrews and Ector, coming from El Paso).

The first bishop was Most Rev. Rudolph A. Gerken, then pastor of Ranger, Texas. In 1933, Bishop Gerken was appointed Archbishop of Santa Fe, and Robert E. Lucey came from California as Bishop of Amarillo. In 1941, Bishop Lucey was named Archbishop of San Antonio, and Most Rev. Laurence J. FitzSimon, then pastor of Seguin, Texas, became the third Bishop of Amarillo. Bishop FitzSimon died in 1958 and was succeeded by his auxiliary, Bishop John L. Morkovsky.

In 1962, the San Angelo Diocese was established and Rev. Thomas J. Drury, then pastor of Christ the King Parish in Lubbock, was named its first bishop. In 1965, Bishop Drury was transferred to Corpus Christi, and Most Rev. Thomas Tschoepe became Bishop of San Angelo.

In 1969, Bishop Tschoepe was transferred to Dallas and was succeeded by Most Rev. Stephen Leven, then an auxiliary bishop of San Antonio, Bishop Leven retired in 1979 and was succeeded by Most Rev. Joseph A. Fiorenza.

Meanwhile, back in Amarillo, Bishop Morkovsky had been transferred in 1963 to Galveston-Houston and Most Rev. Lawrence M. DeFalco came from Dallas to serve as the Bishop of Amarillo.

Bishop DeFalco died in 1979 and Most Rev. Leroy T. Matthiesen of Amarillo was named Bishop of Amarillo in 1980.

On June 17, 1983, the Diocese of Lubbock was created with Most Rev. Michael J. Sheehan as its first bishop. The Diocese of Lubbock embraces an area that was formerly in the Diocese of Amarillo, plus five counties (Jones, Scurry, Haskell, Fisher, and Stonewall) from the Diocese of San Angelo.

Ten years later, Bishop Sheehan was named Archbishop of Santa Fe and, on April 5, 1994, His Holiness Pope John Paul II announced the appointment of Most Reverend Plácido Rodríguez, CMF, as the second Bishop of the Diocese of Lubbock. His episcopal installation took place on June 1, 1994, in Lubbock.

Most Rev. Robert M. Coerver was named his successor September 27, 2016, and was ordained and installed as Bishop of Lubbock on November 21, 2016, at Christ the King Cathedral in Lubbock.

The Diocesan Coat of Arms

The arms of the diocese of Lubbock are composed of a red shield on which is displayed a silver cross. On this cross is displayed a gold crown (diadem). The conjunction of those symbols form the representation traditionally used to signify Christ, the King; titular of the cathedral church for the diocese.

The symbolism of Christ the King is issuant from a base which represents the Caprock Escarpment that stands at the center of diocesan lands and upon which the city is built. This base is black to represent the petroleum often found under the ground. On the black background is superimposed a silver sprig of cotton, the economic mainstay of the region.

The shield – which is the central and most important feature of any heraldic device – is surmounted by a bishop's miter, in gold; the heraldic insignia of a diocese in the Roman Catholic Church.
